

Dear FCC:

This may be hard for you to understand, but most of us Wisconsinites really don't like telemarketers constantly calling us at home. I have read on the web where you are considering weakening the Wisconsin Do-Not Call list. That is just stupid. The law was passed in Wisconsin for a reason. When the telemarketers used to be able to call willy-nilly I was working second shift and could get NO sleep after 8am because they kept calling. I was getting calls from windshield repair businesses sometimes 2-3 times daily, WHEN I HAD NO CAR!! I would tell them that and ask them to take me off the list that they used to call, they said they would and then the next day or sometimes that very same day they would call again. I ended up having to leave my phone off the hook most days, making it impossible for friends and family to reach me in an emergency, which did happen when my Grandmother went into the Hospital after a fall. If you wish to weaken this law, please do the public a favor. Make your home phone number available to us so we can call you and personally voice our complaints to you each and every time somebody calls us. If you want to make our lives miserable again, let us at least spread the misery. Thank you for your time. And remember, if you weaken this very popular law, the people of Wisconsin WILL remember!! Sincerelly, Jeremy D.
